2008 Large-Format Bookings Yearbook

Films and bookings of 2007

In 2007, bookings of repurposed Hollywood films continued their steady rise, while the number of original giant-screen film bookings rose by about the same number, maintaining their slight lead. However, if the trends of the last five years continue, the places could switch next year, as bookings of DMR films continue to increase and those of original LF films take their biannual downturn. (See Chart 1 below.)

Of course, 2008 will see the introduction of Imax Corporation's digital projection system, the rollout of which will increase the number of IMAX screens more rapidly than in any previous phase of the industry's history. It will also pose problems in tallying statistics such as this report: should the digital theaters be counted just the same as film-based systems? Should all the multiplex theaters be separated out from the institutional and standalone commercial theaters? What is a giant-screen theater? These are just some of the questions that this publication — and the entire industry — will have to tackle in the coming years.

Although this report may have a different look in the future, for now we can present it in the form that has become traditional over the past ten years. But this will be the last Yearbook to present data based entirely on film-based bookings.

Trends during 2007

The average length of a booking declined by 14% last year, the steepest drop in ten years. (See Table 1.) However, as we noted last year, this is caused entirely by the presence of DMR films, which typically run for less than eight weeks. The number of Hollywood films per year has increased slightly since 2002, now averaging around six a year. The pace of releases is accelerating: there were only a few openings one month apart in 2005, 2006, and 2007, but the six months from February to July 2008 will see five DMR films. However, only two or three will open in the remaining five months. But the pace will pick up with the installation of more digital IMAX theaters in 2009 and 2010. Imax co-CEOs have predicted as many as ten or twelve titles a year when a large number of screens are digital.

As seen in Table 2 on page 3, the length of the average Hollywood film booking has declined significantly in the past four years, and last year stood at only 54 days.

At the same time, bookings of original LF films have lengthened from a average of 211 days in 2005 to 254 days last year. However, exhibitors have more choices than ever — 141 films were in active distribution in 2007 (see Table 3) — and theaters are showing more films per year than they did in the past. For distributors this means less income per booking. The average number of films theaters show in the course of a year seems to have stabilized at about six (see table 4), about seven films per year for commercial screens, compared to five per year for institutional theaters.

We have written at length in previous Yearbooks about how the disparity in booking lengths derives from the different business models of Hollywood and the giant-screen industry. The Hollywood studios expect to earn the bulk of a film's box office take within the first few weeks of its theatrical release window, and multiplex managers are quick to drop an underperforming film in favor of the next hot picture. Furthermore, income from the theatrical run now accounts for a relatively small portion of a film's total income, after ancillary sources like pay-per-view, cable, broadcast, and home video are factored in.

Conversely, LF films rarely have large simultaneous openings, and typically play in theaters for three, four, or five years. Institutional theaters make booking decisions and set their schedules months or years in advance, to help schools and other groups plan their trips. Although recent years have seen many LF titles released to HDTV outlets, in general, giant-screen filmmakers don't have as many, or as lucrative sources of non-theatrical revenue for their films as the studios.

For these and other reasons, the short runs of DMR films do not have the same meaning that a similarly short booking for a traditional film would have. An eight-week run in 100 theaters could be a huge success for a typical big-budget Hollywood film. But for a 40-minute LF documentary, eight weeks in each of 100 theaters would almost certainly be a disaster. That's because the Hollywood film had a huge national marketing campaign that drove millions of people to the theaters during those eight weeks. Also, even if the production budget was $100 million, the studios spend an average of about $1.5 million on the IMAX edition of a film, so its break-even point is very low.

The production budget of the average 2D LF film — about $5 million — usually can't support a national media campaign, so marketing is left to the local theaters. Although the theaters have become experts at reaching their target audiences, even in the best of circumstances they don't have the high profile of the studio releases. Instead of arriving in a flood on opening weekend, institutional audiences trickle in over six or eight months.

Furthermore, in exchange for doing most of the marketing, and paying for their prints, theaters keep a much larger share of the box office than their multiplex counterparts: between 70 and 80%, instead of about 50%. Thus LF filmmakers spend more to make their films than the studios, and get less back in return. This is why they need longer bookings.

Although some giant-screen distributors, like MacGillivray Freeman Films and National Geographic, have tried large day-and-date openings, for most others it is not practical. So the different business models of the segments will probably not change significantly in the near term.

Top films of 2007

Of the top ten films by bookings count (see page 24), seven were DMR films. The top five all had more than 100 bookings each during the year, and the top three (Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix, Spider-Man 3, and Beowulf) all broke the previous record of 118 bookings in a single calendar year set by Space Station in 2003. Unlike 2006, when several Hollywood films with high bookings counts flopped at the box office, virtually all of 2007's DMR titles were big hits. This led to a 56% increase in box office for Hollywood films in IMAX theaters, up from $93 million in 2006 to $145 million in 2007.

The top non-fiction film, with 94 bookings throughout the year, was 2006's Deep Sea 3D, co-produced by Imax and Warner Bros. Pictures. The next two traditional films, at positions number 9 and 10, were National Geographic's Sea Monsters, which opened in September, and MacGillivray Freeman Films' Hurricane on the Bayou, from 2006.

With ten films in release and a total of 581 bookings, Warner remains the world's largest LF distributor for the third year in a row (see Table 5 below). National Geographic and MacGillivray have both leapt over Imax, with 357 and 289 bookings, respectively, compared to Imax's 256. Paramount Pictures joined the list of GS distributors in 2007, with 205 bookings of two films. The combined bookings count of the remaining 18 distributors, two of which are Hollywood studios, is about 560, slightly short of Warner's total.

Institutional vs. commercial

The major segments of the theater market — institutional, multiplex, and standalone commercial — continued their standard booking practices in 2007, for the most part sticking with films made for their audiences: DMR for the multiplexes and traditional non-fiction titles for the institutions and standalones. And although one might have expected each segment to warm up to the idea of trying the other's fare, the amount of crossing over has not increased. To the contrary.

The major cinema chains remain almost entirely uninterested in non-DMR films. Regal Cinemas, which is the world's largest conventional and giant-screen exhibitor, with 18 IMAX theaters, put every DMR title on every one of those screens last year, but only booked one non-DMR film — National Geographic's Sea Monsters — in five of the 18, for about a month. National Amusements (with eight IMAXes) and AMC Entertainment, Inc.

(with seven), did the same, each booking Sea Monsters in a only a few theaters.

Canada's Cineplex Galaxy booked only DMR films in its nine theaters, as did Mexico's Cinepolis chain in its five. Overseas, chains in Spain, Eastern Europe, and Asia have also relied almost exclusively on repurposed Hollywood films.

Among the majors in North America, only Cinemark USA, with six IMAX theaters, has made an effort to book traditional GS films and attract schools and other groups to see them. With the departure last year of marketing VP Terrell Falk, who came to the chain from the museum world, and established and oversaw the development of that program, it is unclear whether Cinemark will maintain its commitment to non-DMR films.

However, many of the regional chains, such as Michigan's Celebration Cinemas and Indiana-based Goodrich Quality Theaters, have found it worthwhile to book and market traditional non-fiction films, reaching out to schools, seniors, and other groups in their communities.

On the other side, the number of institutional theaters that booked at least one Hollywood film in 2007 increased from 50 to 65, so that now almost half of the world's 137 institutional IMAX theaters have shown at least one Hollywood film. (The 88 non-IMAX institutional theaters world wide do not have the option of booking DMR films.) But because of the growth in multiplex screens, institutional theaters account for a smaller percentage of all DMR bookings than they did in previous years, only 13% in 2007, down from 16% in 2006, and nearly 25% in 2004.

In previous years one of the obstacles to museums that wanted to show a DMR film was the long-standing Hollywood practice known as "clearance," whereby distributors essentially give favored exhibitors veto power over bookings to other theaters within a certain distance from their screens. LF Examiner has heard that Regal was known for being particularly aggressive in blocking institutional IMAX theaters from getting DMR titles, even in markets where the chain had no giant-screen theaters of its own.

There is some anecdotal evidence that clearance has become less of an issue recently than it was a few years ago. Theaters that previously had been blocked are now getting DMR films, although sometimes only after threatening legal action or pulling political strings. We've also heard from an expert in the conventional theater industry that the accepted radius for clearance, long set at about five miles, is shrinking, in some cases to a mile or less. However, the spread of digital IMAX theaters over the next few years could raise the clearance issue anew.

Chart 2 on page 3 shows the percentages of bookings that a select group of LF films earned from each of the three major segments: multiplex, commercial standalone, and institutional. All bookings, not just 2007's, are counted, and films are ordered from left to right by decreasing percentage of institutional bookings.

Market penetration

Table 6 on page 5 shows the market penetration data we began reporting in 2004's Yearbook. A word about the numbers and how they were reached.

Calculating the percentage of possible theaters a given film has reached is complicated by several factors, the primary one being the multiple film formats embraced under the "large-format" rubric. Since not all films are distributed in 8/70, and even fewer are printed to 10/70, it would be inappropriate to count those theaters against a film's potential market. Also, older films that are no longer active had a smaller universe of theaters available to them.

So to calculate penetration, we took the starting date of each film's latest (or last) booking, and counted the number of theaters open on that date. (This ensures that each film is measured against the actual number of theaters it could have reached by the end of its active life.) Penetration is the number of theaters that booked the film divided by the total number of theaters open at that time. If the film was distributed in 8/70 and/or 10/70, theaters with those formats are counted in the All Bookings total. We also present columns that show penetration in 15/70 theaters only, 8/70 theaters only, and both 8/70 and 15/70 (but not 10/70). The top 20 films released since 1997 are shown in each column. (Before 1997 our bookings data are incomplete.)

Measuring penetration naturally favors older films that have had a chance to work their way through the worldwide circuit of LF theaters. Recently released films will rarely have as high a penetration number as older titles.

Because the table covers a relatively long time-frame, familiar titles remain at the top of the lists: Everest, Mysteries of Egypt, T-Rex, and Space Station, although their order has shifted slightly. Notable in this year's table is the appearance of several 2007 DMR films: Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix, Spider-Man 3, and Beowulf. Their massive day-and-date openings, each on more than 75 IMAX screens, and their winning of more than 125 total bookings each in the year, enabled them to leap up into the top twenty over older traditional LF films.

How we calculated the averages

The average booking lengths referred to in this article were calculated by combining contiguous listings (which are shown as separate entries in our regular bookings lists) and excluding from the count

- Bookings that started before the year being averaged;
- Bookings for which we did not have precise start and end dates;
- Film festival screenings;
- School bookings (films shown irregularly to school groups, but which are not on the regular public schedule);
- Certain destination films with extremely long runs at their home theaters;
- Bookings in theaters that opened after Jan. 1, 2007.

This left 896 records from which we calculated the average booking lengths in days, based on the starting date of the booking.

Acknowledgements

LF Examiner's bookings data would be substantially less complete without the nearly universal cooperation of the LF industry's distributors. I would like to extend special thanks to the following individuals who cheerfully and promptly supply me with data every month.

Bookings: 2007 by Film

2,253 bookings of 141 films at 353 theaters

The data on the following pages are not warranted to be comprehensive or accurate in every detail, despite our best efforts to make them so. They have been compiled from surveys of LF theaters, distributors, the world wide web, and other sources.

We will make every effort to improve the thoroughness, accuracy, and usefulness of these data. If your theater or film is not shown here, please get in touch with us to update our listings.

Where a date is not shown, it means that no date was provided by the source or, in the case of a closing date, that no date has been set, or that the run is indefinite.
